The media organisation supports the project described in the attached application. We understand that, in the event of a grant award, it is the sole responsibility of the applicant to complete the project. We agree to publish or broadcast the funded project as long as it meets our editorial standards.

The media outlet and the grantee(s) agree to follow the transparency standards of the grant programme and mention the source of funding as follows:

"This project has been funded (co-funded, if applicable) by the European Journalism Centre (EJC) via its Global Health Journalism Grant Programme for Germany (www.Journalistenstipendien.org)."

Grant recipients and supporting media outlets agree to provide to the EJC information on the impact of the published story such as page views, visitors/users, viewers or listeners ratings (broadcast media only). Please note that the EJC considers impact measurement to be of major importance for this grant programme and that the failure to deliver the requested information may jeopardise future grants and collaborations with this grants programme.

We also grant permission to the EJC to have the completed project(s) translated into English (where applicable) and to promote it on the dedicated Grant Programme website: www.Journalistenstipendien.org. By signing this letter, you agree that the final product may be syndicated (re-published) by non-competing media outlets in other countries. The EJC may facilitate such syndication activities without any financial or copyright interests of its own. Any terms and conditions of a possible re-publication will be negotiated exclusively between the rights holders.

The media outlet and grantee(s) commit to publish the funded project under a universal open access policy, therefore the project cannot be published behind pay walls and has to be freely accessible to a national or global online audience. Publication under a Creative Commons License is encouraged, in order to allow for global and free access.

We understand that neither the EJC nor the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation shall exert any influence on the editorial decision-making of grantees and media outlets.
